

Director of Management Department

Professor Marios Katsiolouides, holds a PhD in Management from the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania in Strategy and International Business. He is currently a professor of Management at Qatar University, where he teaches strategic management, international business and entrepreneurship courses at the undergraduate and MBA levels.*

Throughout his 34-year career, Professor Katsiolouides has taught in a number of universities, including Coastal Carolina University, West Chester University of Pennsylvania, Saint Josephs' University, Villanova University, USA; the American University of Sharjah, UAE, Abu Dhabi University, UAE, and the Hellenic American University in Greece. He is a visiting professor to the University of Cyprus, Galen University in Belize, Linkoping University in Sweden, EDHEC Business School in France, Tulane University in the USA, HEC-Paris in Qatar, and The Mediterranean Agronomic Institute of Chania, Greece. He has worked for the Cyprus Development Bank and the World Bank. He provided consulting services to SMEs in Cyprus, the US, Libya, Greece, the UAE, Qatar, and elsewhere.

His research focuses on the strategic planning process in the for-profit and nonprofit sectors, SMEs, entrepreneurship, as well as on the management of change and innovation. He has authored/co-authored five books, and recently he signed a contract with Palgrave MacMillan Publishers to author a book on Management from an international perspective, and with Routledge for a second edition for his strategic management book. He published over 34 articles (including three cases studies) and 72 conference proceedings on strategic management, international business and small business management.

At First Class Business Middle East he holds the position Director of Management Department